ENORMOUS QUANTITY OF ARMS, MANY PRISONERS ARE TAKEN BY CHANG

Mukden Warlord Continues His Victory In Vicinity Of Shanhaikwan; Chihli Army Retreating Disorderly; Neutrality Of Christian General Is Rumored; Another Fengtien Drive Soon

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Harbin, Oct. 10.—It is reliably reported that Marshal Chang Tso-lin's forces are achieving consistent successes in their military operations in the neighborhood of Shanhaikuan. They have captured four heavy Krupp guns, five mountain guns, nine field guns and fourteen machine guns, a large number of rifles and millions of cartridges, in addition to many transport wagons and supplies. Many prisoners have also been captured. The enemy are retreating in disorder.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Mukden, Oct. 10.—A Foreign Office for the Three Eastern Provinces has been established here. When it has been full staffed, the establishment will be formally notified to the Consular body.

Peking, Oct. 9.—A communique issued this evening claims a victory on the Shanhaikuan front and says that the Fengtien forces are retreating.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Mukden, Oct. 9.—In spite of their successful assault on Chihfung on October 4, the Fengtien troops were unable effectively to occupy the city, the Chihli garrison numbering 60,000; but the Fengtien cavalry continued to harass the enemy pending the arrival of reinforcements. Early today they launched a second attack on Chihfung and, according to a communique, completely captured the city, killing 1,000 and capturing 1,000 as well as a number of guns and a large quantity of supplies. The Chihli forces are reported to be fleeing towards Jehol with the Fengtien troops in pursuit.

It is rumored here that General Feng Yu-hsiang has decided to remain neutral.

A stubborn battle opened at Shanhaikuan on Wednesday. The Chihli right wing first gained but after a day's fighting the whole Fengtien line, according to a communique, advanced, capturing two trench lines and occupying the old Russian barracks and the villages of Hwengtuling and Tankiaolean and other commanding positions.

(Eastern News Agency)

Mukden, Oct. 9.—The Fengtien General Headquarters issued a communique tonight, announcing that the Fengtien troops virtually captured Shanhaikwan this afternoon at 5 o'clock and that the casualties suffered by the Fengtien troops in the latest battle total upward of 1,000, while those on the part of the Chihli forces are innumerable. It is authoritatively reported hat the General Headquarters of the Chihli troops has been removed to Chinwangtao from Shanhaikwan.

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Oct. 9.—The General Headquarters of the Metropolitan Police is reported to have decided to berin censoring all press copies concerning the war tomorrow and has already notified the newspapers here to that effect. The move taken by the police authorities, it is reported, has connection with the fall of Shanhaikwan.

(Eastern News Agency)

Hankow, Oct. 9.—By order of Marshal Wu Pei-fu, it has been decided that all arms and ammunition manufactured at the Hanyang Arsenal will not be supplied to any other provinces for the present so that they may be exclusively devoted to the use of the Chihli troops against the Fengtien forces.

Six airplanes which are being transported to the North by General Tsai Cheng-hsun, Military Governor of Kiangsi, arrived here today and were immediately despatched northward.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Oct. 9.—In the sector of Shanhaikwan, the Chihli troops yesterday afternoon, unable to stand the furious attack by the Fengtien troops, commenced a general retreat, deserting their position there. In the night, no further development was made, excepting sporadic gun-reports. It appears that the Fengtien forces are now making preparations for another big drive shortly.

(Eastern News Agency)

Changchun, Oct. 9.—Martial law was proclaimed here today but the Chinese authorities declare that the law would not be enforced strictly in consideration of effect upon commercial and industrial circles at large as well as upon foreign residents here.

NO DEVELOPMENT IN HUANGTU; RIFLE FIRE NOTICEABLE

Numerous Shell Holes Made At Station, Whose Staff All Have Dugouts

BY D. J. LEWIS

Huangtu, 4:45 p.m., Oct 10.—Nothing new of importance has occurred on this front in recent days. The Chekiang front line is still about one quarter of a mile north of the Huangtu station at bridge No. 24. Heavy rifle firing was noticeable during the stay of THE CHINA PRESS correspondent. The Chekiang front line has not advanced and brisk fighting on the left side of the railway was heard during the night. Col. Ling Lan-ting in charge of the 2,000 Chekiang troops at the Huangtu bridgehead departed during the afternoon to attend a military conference at Nanziang. Three field guns are stationed within 200 yards of the Huangtu railway station, and the station force is still making excellent use of their sleeping quarters in the improvised cellar at the station. The switchmen and guards are also provided with convenient dugouts and of course the numerous shell holes at this station are pointed out to all visitors by the various members of the Huangtu Boosters Association. The rule that one engine be kept constantly at Huangtu with steam up for emergencies is still rigidly enforced. Information received from a reliable source was to the effect that no considerable number of Chekiang troops have been removed from the Huangtu sector and that the total number of troops are in the neighborhood of 5,000. No wounded were reported from the Huangtu area during the day.

At Malu, 7:30 p.m. Upon reporting to the officer in charge at Nanziang I was informed that there was no objection to my proceeding to Kiating provided I desired to make use of my own transportation. I reached the town of Malu at 6:30 in the afternoon and during the hour spent there I was unable to hear any firing. I was informed that Kiangsu made a half-hearted attack on Malu last night but was easily repulsed. From careful inquiries made along the line I am inclined to believe that Chekiang has not made any considerable advance in this sector in the last two days. No fighting was reported today at Kiating.

The press gang is apparently still at work, several groups of coolies from Chapei and vicinity were noticed being led gently but firmly by armed guards in the direction of trains headed for Nanziang and beyond.

15 Killed, 5 Injured As Katah Gunpowder Magazine Explodes

Simla, October 9.—Fifteen persons were killed and five injured and a number of buildings damaged by an explosion at a magazine at Koath when gunpowder was distributed for the Dusserth Festival.

ROYAL ASSENT IS GIVEN IRISH BILL; SOLONS PROROGUE

Bill Passes Third Reading In House Of Lords Without Change

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—The Royal assent was given today to the Irish Bill. Parliament has prorogued.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—In the House of Lords today Lord Carson moved but subsequently withdrew an amendment to the Irish Bill that the Ulster Parliament should be consulted equally with the Irish Free State before the Act was enforced, and the Bill passed the third reading. The Bill has thus passed both Houses without amendment, the declaratory amendment in the House of Lords not being incorporated. The Bill will receive the Royal assent this evening.

TOKIO IGNORED AS MUKDEN - SOVIET PACT IS SIGNED

Japan Believes That Change Of Situation Requires Her Consideration

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Oct. 9.—Reuter learns authoritatively that the Japanese Government knew nothing about the agreement between the Soviet and Marshal Chang Tso-lin until after it had been signed, the terms of it coming as a complete surprise. While no official statement in that connection can yet be made, the Japanese Government consider that the Soviet coup de main as regards the Chinese Eastern Railway introduces an entirely new situation, giving the Russians [illegible] control over the commercial affairs of the Railway, and that the whole situation requires very careful consideration on the part of Japan.

Incidentally, the agreement seems to have seriously shaken the Chinese Government's confidence in M. Karakhan, the Soviet Ambassador, while Marshal Chang Tso-lin's part in it is an unwelcome surprise to the Japanese.

French Economists Leaving For Japan In January Next

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Oct. 9.—The French Economic Mission to Japan leaves here in January and will be absent for two months. It is headed by the engineer, M. Ader, of the Ministry of Commerce, which is organising the scheme jointly with the Ministry for Foreign Affairs with a view to developing French interests in the Far East.

The Government have invited big industrial concerns to appoint members to the mission, to contribute toward its cost and to select their own delegates for each trade represented.

The Government were led to organise the mission in consequence of the success achieved by a similar Belgian Mission to the Far East.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, October 9.—Le Journal announces that a French Economic Mission will shortly proceed to Japan.

Two Sides Gather Force For Next Big Offensive Southwest Of Shanghai

Local Attacks Feel Out Strength Before Further Heavy Fighting; Chekiang Defense Line Begins To Take Shape In Trenches

BY TALBOT PATRICK

Fragments of old front lines and new ones not connected, a comparatively small Chekiang force between Shanghai and the Fukien soldiers, General Ho Feng-lin established in temporary headquarters on the railway line toward Sungkiang, a start by the Chekiang men to dig in new front lines closer to Shanghai, indications that a few defenders in Sungkiang are still holding out against the troops of General Sun Chuan-fang—such were conditions yesterday in the fighting area southwest of the foreign settlements.

About a mile this side of Sungkiang a body of 800 Chekiang men was settled in an arc bulging furthest away from Shanghai at the point where it crossed the railway line. The greater length of the arc was south of the line along a creek parallel to one about a li further south beside which the Fukien troops had their position. Lu's men were armed with five field guns and five machine guns.

The Fukien army in this sector was said by the commander of the Chekiang men to number 3,000 with several field guns and machine guns. From the firing going on, however, and the way in which the soldiers of the Chekiang-Shanghai army said they last night repulsed an attempted advance by the Fukienese, I am inclined to believe that part of the attacking force is still engaged against defenders of Sungkiang and that the city has not yet been captured.

The advancing southerners were reported by officers of the defense line to have reached a point on the Whangpoo opposite Minghong. Foreign observers reported, however, that the Fukienese had not come quite so far but were about a bit further upstream.

About half a mile upstream from Minghong the Chekiang defense line had already taken form in several hundred yards of trenches. The soldiers reported that still another line was under construction four miles west, which would put it close to the area reported to be in the hands of General Sun's troops.

Just what remnants of the former defenders of Sungkiang were still in the city could not be learned, but the presence of some there was hinted in firing heard from the front lines of the Chekiang troops on the railway. These troops handled some talk of an offensive when 500 reinforcements should reach them tonight or tomorrow. In the meantime, trenches and breastworks were being dug in leisurely fashion on either side of the railway embankment about an eighth of a mile behind their front line.

DEFENSE FORCE REMNANT

In the region known as Siao Quinsan, a group of hills a little more than half of the distance from Sungkiang to Chingpu, approximately a thousand Chekiang troops were declared to be still on the job. But officers said that the line curving around the rail line did not connect either with these men or with the parties beyond Minghong up the Whangpoo.

Five of eight higher officers among the troops up the railway have been killed.

Most of the troops have now been supplied with winter uniforms and quilts are now being issued in large numbers. One Shanghai [illegible] is said to be [illegible] an order for 10,000 quilts all paid for in advance.

Today's dirty rumor among the Chekiang soldiers: Fukienese fire on Red Cross men just like anyone else, foreign correspondents included. BEWARE!

British Premier Announces Election On October 29; Nominations On Oct. 18

Parliament To Meet A Week After Election; Thomas Says Affairs Would Not Interfere With Imperial Confab

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Ramsay MacDonald announced that the general election would take place on October 29.

The Prime minister regretted that the action of the Opposition Parties yesterday evening had rendered an election inevitable. His Majesty had consented to a dissolution (Ministerial cheers). The Government was anxious to prevent the general election clashing with the municipal elections in November. Therefore, he proposed prorogation tonight, nominations on October 18 and the election on October 29 (Ministerial cheers). The date of the election was dependent on the Irish Bill being finally passed today but he understood that there would be no difficulty in the House of Lords today and dissolution would occur tonight. Parliament would meet a week or two after October 29.

Mr. J. H. Thomas said that yesterday evening's happenings would not interfere with the Government proceeding with the proposed Imperial Conference.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—The King's Speech on the occasion of the prorogation of Parliament expresses the belief that the Dawes settlement will largely contribute to restoration of international commerce. His Majesty hopes that the disarmament and security protocol adopted by the Assembly of the League of Nations, which will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible, will lead to the first practical measures of lightening the heavy burdens of nations.

The Speech refers to the Anglo-Russian Treaties as a necessary element of the general pacification and economic reconstruction of Europe. His Majesty regrets the failure of the informal discussions with the Prime Minister of Egypt.

The King says that steps have been taken in conjunction with the Governments of the Dominions for the more efficient marketing of food in this country.

Though there are signs of distinct improvement in industry the severe depression continues. His Majesty's Ministers have been actively engaged in the development of a constructive policy to stimulate industry and encourage trade as the only means of dealing fundamentally with unemployment.

Meanwhile the provision of increased unemployment benefit has lightened the burdens of ratepayers and alleviated the sufferings of innocent victims of the industrial depression.

His Majesty hopes that the measures taken for a 15-year building program will effectively remedy the serious overcrowding.

The Speech concludes by referring to the measures taken to assist agriculture, to regulate the wages of agricultural laborers, to take a new census of production and to free educational development from recent restrictions.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—The majority of the members of the House of Commons have already gone to their constituencies where today the election battle begins in earnest.

There are indications that the Conservatives and Liberals will avoid three-cornered contests in a number of constituencies by mutual concessions, with the approval of the leaders.

Several of the Conservative organs are advocating openly this course of action, though diehard organs are opposed to any co-operation.

All party headquarters are

ANNIVERSARY OF THE REPUBLIC IS OBSERVED HERE

General Holiday Marks 13th Birthday Of Nation; War Effect Apparent

With the exception of the military yamens, all government bureaus, courts and foreign consulates yesterday were closed in commemoration of the 13th anniversary of the founding of the Chinese Republic. The five-colored flag was much in evidence in the settlements, but was conspicuous by their absence in Chinese territory.

Several local organisations observed the occasion with programs of speeches. Due to the internecine war, however, there was very little enthusiasm among the better class of Chinese.

Representatives of several radical organisations met at the Temple of the Daughter of Heaven on North Honan Road and aired their grievances against the militarists in the country. An argument between two radicals in the audience created quiet a commotion and the meeting was dispersed unceremoniously.

Two Killed When Military Plane Is Wrecked At Bourget

(French Wireless Through Reuter)

Paris, Oct. 9.—There has been a violent hurricane on the coast of [illegible] heavy [illegible] several ships being lost.

A storm at Bourget today wrecked a military aeroplane. Two passengers were killed.

Situation On Iraq Frontier Critical

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 10.—Anxiety is increasing in regard to the critical situation which is developing on the Iraq frontier, where the invading Turkish force has not only maintained its ground but has been reinforced and is continually pushing forward pickets. Angora has hitherto practically ignored the British notes and verbal remonstrances.

Resumption Of Franco-Russian Relations Favored

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Oct. 9.—A communique announces that the commission studying the question of resumption of Franco-Russian relations has reached an unanimous agreement. The newspapers deduce that the commission favors de jure recognition of the Soviet as a preliminary to economic and financial negotiations.

No Read, But No. One Page Line Around

"Grand Opening Tonight—Remodeled Hotel Parisien—New grill supplying dinner from 8 o'clock on, cooked under foreign supervision—Seven piece orchestra with the Saxophone Sextet—Entertainment including Miss Trixie Le Mar in popular songs and other numbers supplied by de Sheimo from 9:30 until 3 in the morning," that is the way Mr. E. H. Himrod, champion trap shooter, boxing judge and man about Shanghai bulletined to us tonight's program at the hotel of which he is managing director. Whereat Mrs. Himrod remarked that "people never read anything unless it is on a front page in a black line." We told her we'd try what could be done, with a threat to print a retraction if all should not be as promised. The threat goes.

LUNGHUA OPTIMISTIC OVER SUNGKIANG; TO TRY COUNTER-ATTACK

3,000 Troops Cut Away From Chekiang Base Still Defending Railway Stronghold, Asserts Ho; Chekiang Declares Independence; Provisional Constitution Is Promulgated

Despite of the fact that about 3,000 Chekiang troops have been cut off from their main body of forces and bottled up inside the city of Sungkiang, the Chekiang army on the Sungkiang front, under the command of General Ho Feng-lin, continues to maintain an optimistic view of the war situation and expects to re-establish their former battle line today.

The scanty reports which leaked through the defence line from the Sungkiang stronghold yesterday indicate that most of Sun Chuan-fan's Fukien braves withdrew from the city yesterday afternoon through lack of ammunition and in view of the stubborn resistence given by the occupation army, consisting of two battalions of General Lu Yung-hsiang's bodyguards and the main forces of the 28th regiment.

One of the last reports that reached the Chekiang headquarters at Hsin Chiao yesterday afternoon said: "We shall not decline our flesh the honor of being quartered by the silvery sword of war! We are resolved not to evacuate the city."

Upon taking the field, General Ho yesterday appointed Brigadier General Tseng as successor to Wang Ping, the aged commander of the Sungkiang front whose whereabouts is still a mystery. Rumors have it that he returned to Shanghai on Thursday night and is now a refugee in the French concession. Other reports however show that he is still in Sungkiang at the head of his forces. Because of the cutting of communications between Hsin Chiao and Sungkiang, it was impossible to confirm the latter reports yesterday.

Heavy reinforcements were despatched again to Hsin Chiao, Minghong and along the Whangpoo River. General Ho's messages to Lunghwa asserted there was no cause for anxiety in the Chekiang camp.

With Ningpo as the seat of government, a provisional autonomy for the Province of Chekiang was declared on Thursday by representatives of the eleven prefectures, who had previously enjoyed the confidence of the populace, according to an official report from Ningpo yesterday.

The following signed declaration of Independence was broadcasted yesterday:

"Following the assault conducted by four provinces against Chekiang, alien troops have poured into our province. In the districts of Hinghwa, Chuchow, Hangchow, Kashing and Huchow, all houses have been vacated while in the districts of Ningpo, Shaoshing and Taichow, no one is left in peace in their livelihood.

"Being moved by the distress which our provincials are suffering, we have this day declared the province independent in order to comply with the desire of the people for self-government and to devise means for our self-protection.

"The Constitution of the Provisional Self-Government is also promulgated on this day. From now on, the self-government will be absolutely and entirely responsible for the maintenance of peace of the province and the public is hereby ordered to remain calm and refrain from disturbance and suspicion."

The proclamation was signed by General Chaing Tsung-kwei, General Lu Kung-wan and General Chu Yin-kwan, former Civil Governors of Chekiang; Mr. Chu Fu-jen, vice-speaker of the House; Mr. Li Shih-hou; ex-minister of Finance and Messrs. Yin Ju-li, Koo Nai-ping, Tu Chi, Mou Yung-peng, Shao Jui-peng and Chow Pei-tseng.

A translation of the constitution of the provisional government follows:

"Before the promulgation and execution of the permanent constitution of Chekiang, the Provisional Self-Government of Chekiang shall function as the highest administrative organ of the province.

"The Provisional Self-government of Chekiang is organised by commissioners of eleven districts of the province for the purpose of carrying out the administrative work. A set of regulations will be promulgated to govern the rights and obligations of the commissioners.

"The commissioners which form the Administrative Commission shall elect a chairman in accordance with the regulations to govern the rights and obligations of the commissioners and be the executive head of the provincial affairs.

"The administrative commission shall be divided into two

KIANGNAN DOCK'S VALUABLE STOCKS REMOVED BY HO

China's Important Shipbuilding Plant Gutted Of Material Worth Million Taels

What practically amounted to the looting of the great Chinese Government Kiangnan Dock and Engineering Works took place here yesterday when stocks of materials and stores valued upwards of a million taels were removed presumably for sale to junk dealers.

The materials removed consisted of stocks of brass in the shape of sheets, pipes and fittings and immense quantities of copper and other materials. As far as is known, none of the machinery was damaged by removal of parts for sale as junk, but unless something is done soon to protect this important piece of Chinese Government property, it is believed in foreign circles in Shanghai that the entire plant will be gutted of equipment. A launch alleged to be owned by a prominent foreign firm in Shanghai and flying a foreign flag was being used by the Chinese military officials in removing the materials yesterday. That the launch was being used without the knowledge of the foreign concern or the consular officials was believed to be most almost certain since this action would almost amount to a violation of the neutrality position of the Powers.

The general situation of the Kiangnan Dock and Engineering Works has been precarious since General Ho took control and ousted the previous directors, Mr. H. K. Kwong and Admiral K. N. Lew who have been functioning here for several years on behalf of the Chinese Government. The new appointees, Messrs. Chao Ching-hua and P. Tsiang, who were put in office by General Ho are thought to be figureheads and are only carrying out the orders of the local military authorities whose sole interest apparently is to get money out of the concern for use in military activities in this area.

On Wednesday of last week, a considerable stir was produced by a decision of the new directors of the dock to hold up delivery of five foreign-owned ships which were in the docks for repairs. Although it has been customary to release ships immediately after repairs are completed the owners of these ships were notified by the new directors that the ships would be held until checks were received for the repair work. The owners were thus placed in a difficult position due to the fear that if they paid for the work that the activities of General Ho and the directors of the works might later be declared illegal by the Chinese Government and another payment demanded. Although this controversey is still proceeding, it was reported yesterday that the owners of one of the boats had finally sent a check covering repairs of the work on their vessel, but that up to noon yesterday the ship had not been released in accordance with the directors' own proposition.

The Kiangnan Dock and Engineering Works is the largest institution of the kind on the China coast and during the world war achieved considerable prominence by being awarded the contract to construct on behalf of the American Government four 10,000 ton cargo boats. These boats were completed and delivered and as a result of this the dockyard has been able to obtain considerable work from American shipping companies as well as from the United States Shipping Board itself.

departments, one for military and one for civil affairs, each department to have one chairman who shall be elected by the commission. The organisation of the departments shall be governed by regulations to be promulgated later.

"The Provisional Self-Government shall have a Deliberative Council, the organisation of which shall be governed by regulations to be promulgated later.

"The Administrative Commission shall have a General Staff and a secretariat.

"The Provincial Assembly shall be convened by the Provisional Self-Government.

"The Provisional Self-Government shall be abolished upon the promulgation and operation of the Permanent Provincial Constitution.

"This Constitution shall take effect on the day of its promulgation."

BOOK ON YELLOW AND HAI RIVERS IS PUBLISHED

Father Licent's Observation Of His Ten Years Coming Off Press

Scientists and Sinologues will welcome the publication of Father Licent's account of his ten years' travel and study of the Yellow River and Hai River basin, which is now coming off the presses. Not only these but merchants, manufacturers, students and all men interested in China will be deeply grateful for this magnificent compilation, which took ten years to write and nearly ten years to print.

The work is divided into three volumes of 1,600 letter-size pages and is accompanied by a folder containing 150 large maps illustrated on their marginal and open spaces by 3,000 photographs. It is written in an easily translated French, free from abstruse technicalities and obscure terminology. It is not exactly a text-book on scientific matters but is a discriminating and exact record of discovery couched in a charming narrative form. It is just the sort of writing one may expect of a seeker after knowledge; from a pioneer whose enthusiasm carries him forward in search of truth and whose delight in discovery leads him to write more in the terms of an evangelist or a pathfinder than in those of a matter-of-fact scientific book-worm.

Only 400 copies of the work have been printed. They will be numbered from 1 to 400 and will be, therefore, more in the nature of a private circulation. There will not be another edition. The cost of publication and the small field to which it appeals make it prohibitive as commercial venture. Even as it is the book is being sold at a price barely above the cost of actual printing, being more in conformance with other of the French Fathers' contributions to the common welfare. No possible accounting whatever is made of the huge cost of these ten years of expeditions into the heart of China.

A remarkable feature of Father Licent's work is the systematic way he has recorded rock specimens. Each one is given a number, which appears in the text, on the map and on the actual specimen in the museum. This museum, about which much more might be written, contains all the specimens collected throughout the ten years travel. There are listed according to the system of the British Museum, in which Father Licent studied for six months, objects that would fascinate the student and profoundly interest the layman anywhere. The history of mankind—the story of the rocks—is there from the flint instruments of Paleolithic and Neolithic man down the stages of agriculture, handicraft and industry through which man has progressed. There are fossils of all but fifteen mammals known to mankind; there are shale impresses of fish of the Cretacious period; there are thousands of specimens of birds, plants and insects, many of which are quite unknown to anyone outside a few scientists in this part of the world.

But they are in a museum and inaccessible except to those able to make a journey to Tientsin, or to those who live there. However, although one might not enjoy the actual sight of these wonderful objects, they are fully recorded in Father Licent's books, both by description and photograph.

To those further interested in this work a copy of the prospectus will be sent by the publishers, La Librairie Francaise, upon receipt of names and addresses.

The First Japanese Ship On Australian-European Run Sails

(Reuter's Service)

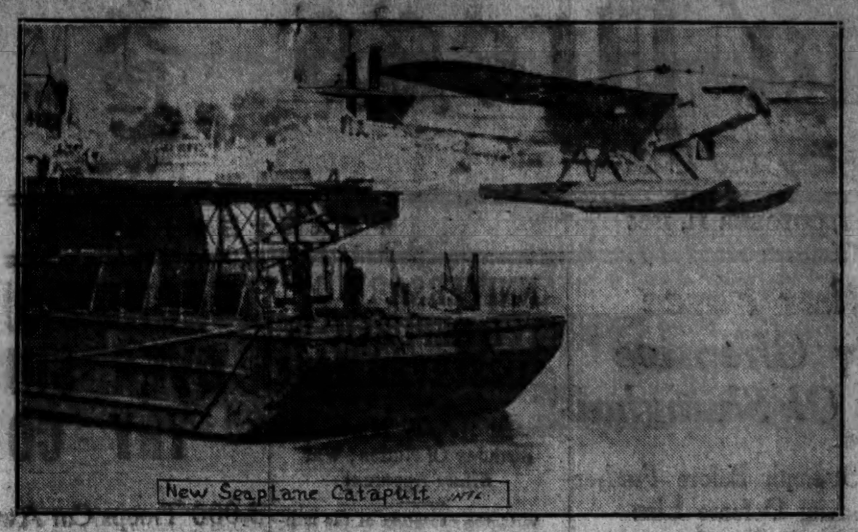
Melbourne, Oct. 9.—The Beifast Maru, which is the first vessel of the new Japanese shipping combine to enter the Australian-European trade, sailed today with a full cargo of 8,000 tons.

Note: It was reported on October 7 that the Beifast Maru was proceeding to Europe with 1,800 tons cargo.

POWDER SHOOTS PLANES FROM NEW CATAPULT ON WARSHIPS



Abandoning the old type of compressed air catapult, the United States Navy has fashioned one which uses a charge of powder to start seaplanes off decks of battleships. The new catapult consists of a car on which the plane is mounted, and which is attached to a piston by means of a series of ropes and pulleys. The piston is contained in a chamber in which is placed the powder charge. When the explosive is ignited it drives the car forward on a track fifty feet long at a speed of sixty miles an hour, at which speed the plane is launched into the air. A plane is here shown at the start of its attempt to take the air from the deck of a ship.

CHARLES ADDIS ANSWERS ARTICLE BY MR. RUSSELL

Says Writer Has Been Betrayed Into Distorting Facts To Suit His Own Theory

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—In a letter to the Morning Post, in reply to Mr. Bertrand Russell's article in the New Leader on September 17, Sir Charles Addis says that it is a mistake to suppose that the rivalries of the Tuchuns are in any way an advantage to the foreign Powers, whose nationals, being mostly traders, have everything to lose by disorder. Talk of wringing concessions from the Chinese is ridiculous.

Sir Charles Addis says that Dr. Sun Yat-sen's idealism has been responsible for much bloodshed and misery but it is incorrect to say that the British in Hongkong regard him with enmity.

Mr. Russell's reference to slavery in Hongkong is misleading. The lot of the "muitsai" compares favorably with that of the children employed in Chinese factories.

With regard to Weihaiwei, Sir Charles Addis points out that Mr. Russell's statement that the Earl of Balfour had promised immediate restoration to China is incorrect. The Earl of Balfour stated at the Washington Conference that Britain proposed to restore Weihaiwei to China under suitable conditions.

In conclusion, Sir Charles Addis says that Mr. Russell has been betrayed into distorting facts in order to suit his preconceived theories as to what the British policy in China ought to be.

The Morning Post, in a leading article, says that there are too many Russian and Chinese Bolshevists in China at present and British traders and bankers wish to get rid of them in the interests of good Government and sound trade. Mr. Russell, in misrepresenting the motives of his own countrymen and championing discredited politicians, is publishing a travesty of facts and simply abetting the conspirators, who find in the continuance of anarchy a source of private profit and a field of intrigue.

To Increase Guarantee To Empire Exhibition

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons today Mr. MacDonald said that he believed that the proposal, which had not yet been passed, to increase the British Government guarantee to the Empire Exhibition from £100,000 to £600,000, could be carried out administratively, but the matter was being investigated.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 10.—It is authoritatively stated that the Government has decided in favor of reopening the Empire Exhibition in 1925. The extent of Dominions participation is not yet known but the Cabinet Committee has concluded that even if some of the exhibitors withdraw a still larger number is ready to replace them.

feverishly active, and all profess to be well prepared.

The Liberals at the present time have only 200 candidates, but hope to put into the field nearly as many as a year ago.

Various party leaders are arranging to address big demonstrations throughout the country.

There are nearly 30 women candidates already in the field as compared with 33 in the last election. This number includes 8 Conservatives and 17 Laborites.

The Labor Party is optimistic of returning in increased strength. The Unionists are confident of recovering many seats lost on the Protection issue. Some even are prophesying that they will obtain a clear majority.

The crisis has only slightly affected the stock markets, where the removal of the uncertainty is welcomed.

On Thursday afternoon, before a well attended audience at the hall of the Shanghai Lodge of the Theosophical Society, Miss Edith Gray, the American lecturer, explained the doctrine of reincarnation, which is gaining ground with Occidental as well as Oriental races. The experiences of any ordinary life tend towards reincarnation as the most logical theory to account for the trials and inequalities with which we are faced, and afford inspiration and hope to those who are ascending the ladder of spiritual evolution. Such of the audience as wished to pursue the study of this subject were invited to enrol in the Karma and Reincarnation Legion, instituted by Dr. Weller Van Hook, of America.

The final meeting in the series of special evangelistic services conducted by the Rev. John M. MacInnis, Ph.D., Lit. D., in the Shanghai Free Christian Church, was held yesterday afternoon at which time Dr. MacInnis gave an eloquent address on "Christ and the Future." This sermon was the climax of the series which he has been giving during the week, and in it he showed clearly what the Bible teaches in regard to the Coming Again of Jesus Christ, and the results of that event in respect to the Church and the World. The attendance at the closing meeting was larger than at any previous one, the congregations having increased in size each evening. Many expressed the hope that Dr. MacInnis may return to Shanghai for a longer campaign, within the next year or two. His simple style of stating clearly the truths of the Christian doctrine, and his attractive personality, have made a deep impression upon his hearers. Mrs. G. Stroebe sang a solo at the closing meeting, which was also appreciated. Gratitude was expressed from the pulpit for the liberal space given in the newspapers to the reports of Dr. MacInnis' addresses.

Heard Makes New Record For Kiangwan Club; Good Dividends; Brand's Excellent Day; Unfortunate Accident To Soong

A splendid crowd was present at yesterday's meeting of the International Race Club, held on the Shanghai Course, and the day was a most interesting one. In the sixth race, the Mart Plate, Mr. Heard on Brackenfield broke the record for seven furlongs, going the distance in 1.46, two-fifths of a second under the time made by Sideway, which has stood as a record to date. The Club will have to decide upon the acceptance of the record, however, as it was not made upon their course but upon the Shanghai Course.

There were some excellent races, a number of surprises and some good dividends. One unfortunate event marred the day, this being an injury to L. F. Soong in the eighth race. Sixteen ponies started in this race, and they were pretty well bunched just before reaching the bend, when two jockeys were unhorsed, Mr. Soong, on Relationship, and Mr. Springfield, on Zoulou. Mr. Springfield was practically uninjured, but Mr. Soong was trampled on and his collarbone broken. He was taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

J. K. Brand had a splendid day. He rode in every race excepting the first, winning three, making two seconds, and getting one third, in only two races failing to gain a place. In the third race, the Autumn Plate, he came in first on the veteran pony Old Bill, who was not the favorite, and paid a dividend of $32.40. The time was good, 2.28-4/5 for the mile and a quarter.

The Novices Race, which was first on the program, was won by Pugilist, with Mr. Hughes up, coming in a length and a half ahead of Hot Stuff, with Mr. Davis. New Moon, Mr. Koo up, came in an unexpected third, and paid a dividend of $39.90 for place.

In the second race, the Moderate Plate, Smithfield was an easy winner, Hoich Pot, with Yu up, furnished a surprise by coming in second, paying a dividend of $44.20 for place. Brand, on Man-of-War, was third.

In the Autumn Plate Mr. Brand made his first win of the day, on Old Bill, and won again in the fourth race, the Patriotic Plate, on Wittyfellow. In the fifth race, the Entente Cordial Stakes, only three ponies entered, the event being won by Battleship, with Liu up. Brand, on Moon Star, was a good second.

In the next event Mr. Heard, winning the Mart Plate in record time on Brackenfield, was by no means a favorite. As a result, those who backed him in this wonderful run cleaned up excellently, the dividend for win being $33.10.

The seventh race, the October Selling Plate, was something of an outsiders' event, none of the first three ponies being real favorites. Haimovitch, who came in first on his own pony Baby Eyes, paid $22.70 for win, but a bigger surprise was Vestborg, with Davis up, coming in second and paying a dividend of $62.00. Settlement Day, Chun up, was the third pony.

In the eighth race the accident occurred which was referred to above. Leadership, with Liou up, won this race in 1.47-4-5, excellent time for the seven furlongs, beating out Woodcroft, Brand up, by a length and a half.

In the last race of the day, the Autumn Cup, J. K. Brand made his third victory of the day, on Harbin over the mile and a half. His splendid win was in the last half-mile of this race, when he forged to the front and won over Harvest King, Heard up, by two lengths. Midnight Moon, McBain riding, was a good third, and paid a dividend of $37.40.

MUSICAL BUOYS, NEW WATER GAME.

The chief attraction at the beach at Portsmouth, Eng., is the new water game, "musical buoys," in which naval and civilian competitors take part. Ten life buoys are used by the 21 competitors. A band plays while the men are in the water. The instant it stops the players each attempt to get into a buoy. Those without buoys are eliminated, the game continuing until there are left only two men for the finals.

GALLOPERS BEAT JAPANESE NINE IN LOOSE GAME HERE

Poor Exhibition By All-Stars; Bolton In Box Again

On the new Pioneer Baseball Field yesterday afternoon the Gallopers sent the All-Star Japanese team down to defeat by the score of 10-2.

The locals had a full team on the field at the time of the game, but the Japanese nine were lacking two men to start, so they borrowed Bills and Kingman until another player came to take Kingman's place. Bills played the full game with the Nipponese aggregation, and scooped up everything that came his way.

The locals got their first run across the plate in the second inning, when Bullard got on base via a single and after reaching second came home on an error by the Japanese third baseman. After adding another tally in the third frame, the Gallopers scored four runs in the following inning, when Bristow started off with a hit to center-field, which was followed by Bolton's two-bagger to the same area. Bristow reaching third. After Taylor went out to short Thatch drew a free pass to the initial sack. Bristow scored when Scott was thrown out at first, and Maloney walked filling the bags again. Hyde then came through with a long slam to left field which brought in Bolton and Thatch. Maloney also scored. Smith got on base by a fielder's choice, but was later thrown out at second.

In the fifth inning the Japanese crossed the plate for the first time. Uyeda, who led off, hit to center field, and scored on Tsukamoto's drive to right field. In the next stanza they added another run to their credit, for with one down Bills singled, and a long crack from Sakurai's bat brought him home.

When the Gallopers came to bat again in the sixth inning they drove in three more runs. Taylor drew a pass, and Maloney drove him home with a hot grounder through short. With Maloney on base Harry Kingman, back on his own team again crashed out a long drive to the center-field bleachers which brought in two more runs for the inning. Bullard got on base in the following inning, reached second, and the first baseman's error allowed him to come home and put up the final tally for the Gallopers.

Miss Wethered To Meet Miss Fowler In Golf Final

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 9.—In the English Ladies' Golf Championship at Cooden Beach, Miss Wethered, the holder, defeated Miss Cecil Leitch in the sixth round by 4 up and 3 to play and beat Lady Cruise 6 up and 5 to play in the semi-final.

Miss Wethered meets Miss Fowler in the final tomorrow.

Baseball Today

The Gallopers are scheduled to meet the All Star team from the boats of the U. S. Asiatic Fleet now in harbor and which promises to be a very good scrap. The game is due to start at 3:30 this afternoon with Scott probably hurling for the locals.

Discusses Dinosaurs And A Baby

Peking.—Upon entering the third courtyard of Roy Chapman Andrews' Chinese residence, which formerly belonged to a Manchu Prince of the Ching dynasty, I saw not the half mounted skeleton of a dinosaur, nor the ribs of a mammoth of the paleozoic age, but a very gaudy toy duck with yellow beak and blue body, a rubber doll with coal black hair and a most delectable pink celluloid rattle.

The curly headed owner of these arrived a moment later in the arms of his Chinese amah, waved a cordial greeting and graciously offered me the rattle to play with while he himself clung to the doll. It was an act of gracious hospitality accepted as such.

"Don't you think he's a pretty lusty kid?"

I turned to greet his proud father, the distinguished explorer who had returned but three days previously from an eight months' trip to the United States, where he had delivered lectures on the discoveries made by the third expedition to Mongolia.

"And, just think, this boy was not a than seven months old before I saw him." Mr. Andrews continued. "You can't wonder, then, that I was anxious to wind up my affairs in America and get back to China!"

Mr. Andrews led the way from the courtyard into the great dimly lighted living room which extends nearly the width of his house. A high ceiling of vaulted tile is billowing in reproduction of the desert tents of the warrior nobles of Kublai Khan. With little effort, one's imagination carries him back to those days, and further yet, under the spell of Mr. Andrew's words, until the room is a spacious cave of the paleozoic age with mammoths and dinosaurs trooping down at eventide to drink from a muddy tarn. One's mind ventures less haltingly into the vast stretches of pre-history, for those ages are very real to Mr. Andrews and he talks of them in the same matter-of-fact manner we discuss our discovery of the mountain lake in the Catskills or a new summer resort.

Although the next archaeological expedition to Mongolia will not leave before next April, Mr. Andrews is already deep in the advance arrangements, personally supervising every detail and eliminating as far as possible the element of chance.

"Will this expedition have a more definite aim than the previous three?" I asked.

It would, he explained, since the three past expeditions had established basic theories on which he could now proceed.

"The previous trips," he declared, "have been to a certain extent the pratical vindication of theories proposed first by Dr. Osborn in 1900, that the Central Asian plateau contained perhaps more of the primeval history of the world than any other locality. This is true for two reasons, namely, that in many other localities water erosion has swept away the sediments, carrying with them the remains of the petrified history of the world. In Mongolia, however, there is a great bathylith or granite floor upon which the sediments have been heaped and in which were buried the remains of prehistoric animals. The erosion has been largely by wind, leaving great inclosed basins which are the happy hunting ground of archaeologists. The specimens discovered in Mongolia have in the majority of cases been more or less complete and, because of the dry atmosphere, less affected by climatic changes and, therefore, in a better state of preservation. Now that our original theories have been vindicated, our next step is to concentrate as much as possible upon the origin of man and try to discover how our forefathers lived, moved and had their being.

"We have been exceptionally fortunate in securing the services of Ralph Cheney, who is universally acknowledged as one of the greatest palebotanists living. Mr. Cheney will specialise in plant life fossils and through the existence of various specimens formulate theories regarding climatic conditions thousands of years ago. By knowing that the approximate climate was through the existence or non-existence of certain forms of plant life we hope to be able to trace the great human migrations which occurred at that time, since man's actions have always depended on the weather."

Then I asked Mr. Andrews a very elementary question—how palaeontologists knew where to dig for fossil remains.

"It is no great secret," he answered. "The signs of fossil life to a palaeontologist are just as clear as an electric sign on Broadway. Perhaps the best example is that of an iced cake. Until one cuts into the cake it is impossible to know whether it is a layer cake or just a pound cake with raisins. Similarly with palaeontology, there are only certain kinds of rock formation which contain fossils. By examining cross sections of this rock it is often possible to see outcroppings of fossil specimens, which are the prize raisins in our stone cake. A prospector for gold does not seek the mother lode in non-auriferous sand. Nor do paleontologists excavate where there are no signs of fossils."

Mr. Andrews stated that the next expedition, which is considerably larger than any of the previous ones, would probably work farther south and west along the outer edges of the great Mongolian plateau and along the rim of that vast expanse of shifting sand known as the Gobi, or desert of the northwest. He admitted quite frankly that the former excavations were not nearly worked out, but that the hope of new discoveries eclipsed all other present considerations.

"After we have tested our theories anent early migrations of the human race, we can then go back and work over the fields already tested and found productive of fossils of interest," Mr. Andrews said.

The expedition will be divided into three main groups, each abl to work independently of the other and each containing three or four foreigners and a similar number of trained Chinese. As leader of the expedition, Mr. Andrews will act as liaison officer between the groups.

Mr. Andrews was enthusastic over the response made by the American people to his appeal for funds to finance the expedition. He stated that subscriptions had been received from persons living in every state in the Union, as well as Porto Rico.

Mr. Andrews plans to leave Peking soon for Urga, the capital of Mongolia, to make the necessary diplomatic arrangements regarding the issuance of passports, etc., for the members of the expedition. Upon his return he will erect a laboratory in his own compound where many of the specimens may be treated prior to their shipment to America, thereby greatly facilitating their transportation.

Plans are well under way for the establishment of a national history museum in Peking under the joint committee which will foster the interest of the Chinese in the prehistoric discovries in northern Asia. It is Mr Andrew's hope that a duplicate specimen of everything sent to America may be given to this new museum, thereby further cementing the bonds of friendship between China and the United States.

U.S. INCREASES HER SHARE OF WORLD TRADE

Merchandise Goes To More Foreign Ports Than Before The War

The share of the United States in world international commerce steadily increases. Compilations of world international trade, says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York indicate that our share of the world in 1923 amounted to approximately 17 percent of the total.

International trade, says the Trade Record, is estimated by the Department of Commerce at approximately 46 billion dollars in 1923, and our share of the international trade of the world in that year was about 17 percent against 10½ percent in 1913 and 7¾ percent in 1870. If we go still further back we find that our share in world international trade prior to 1870 averaged about 7 percent.

MANUFACTURES ARE IMPORTANT

Especially interesting, says the Trade Record, is the increasing proportion which manufactures and raw manufacturing material form in this gain in our share of world international commerce. The exports of the United States in our fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the opening of the World War, aggregated $2,364,579,000 against $4,311,284,000 in the fiscal year 1924, while domestic manufactures exported in the fiscal year 1914, were but $1,039,000,000 against $2,150,110,000 in the fiscal year 1924. Manufactures formed but 17 percent of our domestice exports in 1850, 35 percent in 1900 and 51 percent in the fiscal year 1924. The biggest growth in our trade in recent years has been in the commerce with Asia, Oceania and South America, which take largely of our manufactures. Merchandise sent to Asia and Oceania in the fiscal year 1924 aggregated $720,000,000 against $197,000,000 in the fiscal year 1914, and to South America $281,000,000 against $125,000,000 in 1914.

Exports to Europe in 1924 are also greater in total value than in 1914, in 1900 and 51 percent in the fiscal year 1924 against $1,486,499,000 in the fiscal year 1914, all of which preceded the opening of the war.

FOREIGN TRADE GROWS

The recent growth in the foreign trade of the United States is evidenced by the fact that our imports and exports in the decade ending with the fiscal year 1924 aggregated 84 billion dollars against 34 billions in the decade ending with June 1914, and 20 billions in the ten years ending with June 1904. Our international trade in the ten years ending with June 1924 exceeded that of the forty years preceding the opening of the World War. The imports and exports in the forty fiscal years ending with June 1914 aggregated $83,067,326,000, while those of the ten fiscal years ending with June 1924 aggregated $84,617,556,000.

Moonshine Stills Hidden In American Mountains

Mountain moonshiners in the Southern Appalachians have written a fresh chapter in the table of their endless conflict with the law of the land. They have created a new code of strategy, a system of evasion all the more striking because of an engaging quality of apparent frankness.

The moonshiner of Western North Carolina has long been noted for his skill in keeping his operations under cover. Successive generations have been trained in the art of concealment. The lessons have been learned through patient striving. With such success have the operators achieved privacy that the casual wayfarer may pass within a stone's throw of the hidden still without suspecting its existence.

Those were the tactics of the past. Today the moonshiner faces new conditions and he has met them with strategy of new devising. His distilling plant is no longer concealed in the isolated "cover" between rockribbed mountains, in the depths of a cavern, or beneath the friendly cloak of dense foliage. His favorite hiding place for the season of 1924 is in the broad open spaces of the mountain top, where all may observe his goings and coming—and whence he may see all comers.

The strategy of the new environment lies in the ability of the moonshiner to see an approaching visitor. In the coves and caverns that was not always possible. The hidden law-breaker ws dependent upon skillful concealment. He had little chance to escape the stealthy "revenooer" who located the hiding place and crept toward the spot with the unobtrusive movement of a stalking tiger. Too often the revenue officer got the drop on the moonshiner.

HIGH AND SAFE

On the mountain top today the moonshiner is as safe as on a desert island. Totally unscreened though he is, he commands the approaches from all sides. Invaders may be seen for long distances. With the instinct of his type, the distiller can read the signs of danger. He knows the symptoms and he is quick to follow his hunches. If the visitors are prohibition officers, their arrival at the mountain top finds silence and desolation. The moonshiner and his apparatus have disappeared. Stills and other equipment have been moved to safer quarters, to be kept in hiding until the invaders have returned to the lowland.

This state of affairs is vouched for by the State Geological and Economic Survey of North Carolina. Observers for the survey report a fairly general adoption of the new type of strategy among the men engaged in converting North Carolina grain into illicit merchandise. They say that the mountain top, with its vigilant lookout, seems to be the last word in moonshine safety.

The changed location of the base of operations involves the mountain moonshiner in new problems connected with the transportation of materials with which to carry on. The State geologists wondered what the distiller of the mountain top did for water to cool the condensing coils and make the liquor. The answer was not long hidden. The mountaineer uses artificial ice. Instead of carrying water in pails or barrels to the summit, the up-to-date moonshiner carries ice cakes, to be melted as required. In this way he solves one of his problems of transport and at the same time provides a perfect cooling process for his chemical activities.

Mountain-top distilling makes it necessary for the operator to provide transportation for his cumbersome heating plant and the fuel for its operation, but this disadvantage is more than offset by the immunity of his natural watchtower.

SMOKELESS STILLS

The moonshiner has changed his methods in more ways than one. He has learned to eliminate the telltale smoke that once betrayed the location of the hidden still to the vigilant revenue people. The distiller of today is an artist in smoke prevention.

This important improvement has been brought about through the abandonment of the old-fashioned oven, with its cordwood fuel. The efficient moonshiner of today uses gasoline furnaces and stoves. These give him an intense heat without the betraying signs associated with the curling wisp of pale blue smoke which guided many successful raids in other years. Supplies of gasoline are cached in the hills for use as needed. The expense of the undertaking is of little moment, because of the profits made possible by the widespread demand for contraband liquor.

In some of the western counties of North Carolina the forest fire has been revealed as the moonshiner's friend in time of need. Reports to the authorities indicate that several fires of last Spring were started by moonshiners in attempts to divert attention from the smoke of their illicit liquor plants. In burning the forests the moonshiner was following precedents.

During the current year, however, he has learned that the old customs are not always best. The smoke screen worked admirably before the agitation against forest fires had resulted in the maintenance of organised forces of fire fighters. At present there is scarcely a county without its watchful wardens, constantly alert to detect the presence of a woodland blaze and to ferret out the causes behind it.

In the old days the smoke from a forest fire would go unnoticed; now it brings the countryside hurrying to the scene. Instead of proving a cloak for the moonshiner's smoke, the fire in the mountains is now his most glaring advertisement. A few experiences have made short work of the forest fire policy of the distillers.

Financial Times Advocates Fair Control Of China

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 10.—An article in the Financial Times takes an optimistic view of the commercial and industrial progress of China but concludes that China is out of her depth. Thirteen years of experimenting with a form of Government entirely foreign to the nature and history of her people have shown clearly that without assistance China may rapidly sink into decadence and become an international menace, while with sound guidance and strong but fair control by the Powers China and her people could be developed into a factor making for permanent peace in the world.

New York State Brings Action For $49,029,875

New York, Sept. 11.—New York State has designated George Gordon Battle and former Attorney General Charles D. Newton as its special counsel in an action the State will bring to recover $49,029,875 alleged to have been collected illegally in direct taxes by the Federal Government from New York citizens during a period after the Civil War. New York joins a large group of other States who are prepared to bring similar actions as soon as Congress passes the enabling act which was pending when the last session adjourned.

In practically every State attorneys have already signed contracts or are negotiating with the authorities to handle their claims. The claims of all the States aggregate about $300,000,000.

The contract under which Messrs. Battle and Newton are retained by New York State was approved yesterday by Governor Smith. They were designated by Attorney General Carl Sherman.

The sum which New York State will seek to recover represents direct taxes and manufactured articles paid to the Federal Government by taxpayers in the years 1866, 1867 and 1868, according to Captain Burton Smith of 27 Cedar Street, who is associated with counsel for several States in the proposed litigation over similar claims.

Captain Smith said the States would contend that the taxes were collected in violation of the Constitution which provides for a per capita direct tax only.

The bill under which those taxes were levied was introduced in Congress in 1862 and was subsequently amended several times. It provided for an impost on about 200 commodities, including "anything from a pin to a locomotive," according to Captain Smith. The measure was incontrast to the tax legislation during the recent World War, which, according to experts, did not impose a direct tax, but provided for an excise tax, or a license to manufacture or sell those articles.

Captain Smith said that his brother, former United States Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, was in Washington aiding the plan to have the States sue the Federal Government. Former Senator Smith is associated with General Clifford L. Anderson and Frank Harwell of Atlanta in representing Georgia.

Already, according to Captain Smith, contracts to bring legal proceedings have been signed with sixteen States and negotiations are proceeding with twenty-nine other States. The sixteen States which have completed arrangements to Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Minnesota are Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia. Their claims total $116,000,000.

Captain Smith said that the resolution which will be presented in the next Congress simply authorises each State where legislation has been passed or shall be passed, within two years vesting title in the State, to bring suit in the Supreme Court of the United States and directs the United States to make no defense except upon the merits." Captain Smith added:

"Of course, I understand that there are always certain watchdogs of the Treasury who are opposed to the Government paying what it owes, and I presume they will call this a raid on the Treasury."

Following his designation as special counsel for New York State in the litigation, Mr. Battle issued a statement, in which he said:

"When Mr. Burton Smith presented this tax case to me I conferred with former Attorney General Newton, and after a thorough study of the legal questions involved we reached the conclusion that this tax was illegally collected and should be returned.

"The facts were presented to Attorney General Sherman who, after careful consideration, decided that it was well for this State to take part in the effort, and that it was better to employ counsel connected with the organised effort, payment coming to them of course out of amounts collected, rather than attempt to accomplish collection through his salaried deputies whose time was needed for other and necessary work of the State."

REICHSBANK CHIEF LAUDS GENERAL DAWES' SCHEME

Dr. Schacht Sees Intelligent Effort To Settle Reparations

Rome, August 30.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichsbank, who is in Rome for a series of official conferences with Premier Mussolini and Minister of Finance de Stefani, has given an interview to Tribuna in which he lauded the Dawes plan as "an intelligent solution of the complex economic problems of reparation, in that it proceeds in a positive sense."

The German financier declared that Germany was eager to cooperate wholeheartedly with Italy, whose economic and industrial progress since the war he described as "astounding" He detailed Germany's impoverishment and declared that the Dawes plan recognised the axiomatic principle of modern economics; that if one important unit of civilisation suffers all others are bound ultimately to suffer in the same proportion.

SEES ECONOMIC FALLACY

Evil is evil," continued the Reichsbank head. "Poverty is poverty and it is absurd to think that evil can be a mine from which good can be extracted and that poverty can be transformed into a fountain of richness under any consideration."

He declared it was the popular economic fallacy to suppose that progress of modern civilisation followed the artificial laws that govern bridge or mah-jong or "any other game in which one's loss is in direct proportion to another's gain."

He asserted it was perhaps superfluous to repeat once more the truth which had been enunciated an infinite number of times—namely, that it is impossible to extract payments "from those in a state of economic prostration—riches from poverty."

GERMANY TO REVIVE

Germany, Dr. Schacht emphasised, is poor today in a momentary sense.

"Certainly it is not a continuation of these conditions that can render us solvent," he said. "Although liquidly poor, however, we are potentially rich in that we have the possibility to produce. And production is riches. It was on these considerations that the Dawes plan was founded."

In regard to Germany's again growing rich and powerful, as feared "by Germany's enemies," Dr. Schacht conceded this possibility in a revived nation. He said that a country of 60,000,000 people, with the will to live and produce, is bound ultimately to make itself felt in the world.

China Cotton

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld & Son, Inc., state in their current report relative to the cotton market: The market during the early part of the week has remained fairly steady with prices moved within a comparatively narrow range. The readjustment of values has tended to equalise sentiment and has fostered a less aggressive attitude on both sides of the market and a greater inclination to await developments. At the close, Mid-Americans declined some 133 points for December and 120 points for spot, due to the Government report being construed bearish and general selling, in consequence of which, our market responded accordingly.

Meanwhile, regarding the general outlook, legitimate surroundings of the situation continue to point to the probability of lower prices. Spinners continue to buy from hand to mouth in spite of the inherent strength of the yarn market, which is only tending to increase their conservatism and induce a policy of procrastination to be followed as long as the state of the world's cotton markets has a disquieting aspect. Whether normal conditions will be allowed to assert themselves in the near future, is difficult to say. We, however, still believe in lower prices in the long run.

Yarn.—During the early part of the week, the yarn market has been keeping fairly steady. At the close, in sympathy with the weakness of the raw material, prices declined some two to three taels with undertone weak. In all some 3,000 to 4,000 bales have changed hands for export to Szechuen, Tientsin, Fukien, Canton, Swatow, Wuhu, Hankow Kiangse and Yunnan.

SPUNT & CO.'S REPORT

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co. state in their report: Our market may be said to have been very quiet during the past week due to comparatively very little demand evolving in the face of heavy arrivals, which fact brought about, during the greater portion of the week, a moderate downward trend in prices culminating at the close in a decline of nearly Tls. 1 per picul through sympathy with the heavy drop in Mid-Americans on the publication of the U. S. Government report of a bearish crop estimate indicating 12,499,000 bales. Furthermore the reports on the condition of the growth in India is in so far favorable as to encourage the expectancy there of a 6,000,000 bale crop.

The foregoing indications, coupled with an almost assured adequate supply of the domestic staple, cannot but point to a further weakening tendency in the China markets, and, as intimated in our previous circular, spinners may yet have the satisfaction of taking in supplies at prices more suited to their views so long as the political disturbances continue unabated and there is no safety in the distribution of their output in the interior markets, which usually absorb the manufactured products of the local textile industries.

Tone of the market, Weak.

Hankow Trade

The British Chamber of Commerce, Hankow, states in its weekly trade circular dated October 1:

Bar silver opened at 35 with a firmer tendency and closed the week at 35-3-16 ready and forward. New York-London cross rate at 447 on 25th dropped during the week and closed at 445¾ but showed signs of recovery. T. T. opened 3-5⅛d rose to 3-5¼ on 29th ulto. and closed the week at 3-5⅝. 4 m-credits done at 3-6⅛ at the opening of the week firmed up with the T. T. rate and were done at 3-7⅛ to China New Year at the close. Chinese market rates Shanghai Tls. 99 nominal. Local currency $70.45. Native interest 15 percent.

EXPORTS

Business last week was quiet. tael values of produce generally being too high to interest home buyers. Wood oil is in demand from Europe but the American market is dull with buyers holding off. The local market for this article is easier. Tallow and Chinagrass steady. Seed and beans nothing doing. Cotton easier.

IMPORTS

Piece Goods and Yarn:—Condition of market unchanged. No new demand and no clearances.

Piece Goods and Yarn:—The financial stringency continues.

BLACK TEA

Settlements have continued to be made on a large scale during the past week and with the gradual elimination of all the useful tea prices have advanced, while the value obtainable is considerably inferior.

Stock is about 35,000 H-c but out of this total there is very little that shows any attractions either on the score of leaf or cup.

The reduction in supplies has brought out still further quantities of old season's tea, and teas that have been spoilt by the weather and the few sound teas that have appeared have found immediate buyers at advancing prices.

SCORE METHODS OF U. S. YARN SPECULATORS

Eliminate Speculation And End Erratic Market, Says Southern Association

Charlotte, North Carolina, Sept. 1.—Present market conditions are particularly favorable for the the operations of yarn speculators, according to the Southern Yarn Spinners Association in America. Prices are far below replacement value with a weak, fluctuating cotton market tending downward. Active inquiries for quantities enable the speculator to pursue his well laid plans and obtain supplies at favorable concessions. His methods are obvious, but none the less effective.

When yarns are cheap and mills are operating on a curtailed basis speculative houses lay out their schedule of operations for the first signs of inquiries. They usually wire their Southern representative or wire the mills direct and make them offers one to two cents per pounds below the market at the time. Some of the largest operators buy as much as 5,000,000 pounds, which often results in little if any, profit to the spinning mills.

THEIR PLAN OF CAMPAIGN

It is a common occurrence to lay out a plan of campaign to buy up a large part of the deliveries of staple numbers over a period of three or four months. They have been known to pay a difference of as much as four cents per pound the same day in order to take the mill's product out of the market.

A buying movement of this kind usually puts the market up, and when the buyers is assured of a good profit, not including his commission, he begins to sell out his holdings. This means the consumer pays a higher price for his yarn and the spinning mill runs for weeks sometimes at a loss.

MILLS SQUEEZED BY SPECULATORS

Again, when the market has reached a point that would indicate a decline in price, it is their policy to ascertain the exact delivery that the various mills can make. For example: Should the time of the year be April and there is a likelihood of a decline, with the majority of the mills open for business June, July and August, the speculator will not hesitate to cut the market price on the yarn 1c to 5c a pound and sell sometimes millions of pounds short for future deliveries, holding orders until prices are sufficiently below their selling price to show a profit. This is another instance of the mills have their prospective profit squeezed out by the action of the speculator.

At other times when the market is fairly stable for any length of time and the speculator has an offer, for example, of 48c on 20-2 and the lowest quotation he can get from a number of mills is 50c, he will in all probability take the order at 48c and offer it to each mill separately until he finds one that will take it.

If he cannot cover at the sale price he relies on his 5 percent to protect him from any actual loss. Of course speculators sustain heavy losses on account of bad judgment, but they figure if they are right two out of three times they are warranted in taking the risk.

AFFECTS ERRATIC MARKET

The 5 percent commission to the speculators is simply an extra profit, as they depend largely on their speculations for their real gains. It can readily be seen that the mills is placed at a disadvantage under most conditions as far as the speculator is concerned.

If the spinning mills would pick out some reliable selling organisation in which they have confidence and eliminate the 5 percent speculative sales, it would mean a tremendous saving to the mills and help stabilize one of the most erratic markets of a staple commodity.

Extract from the North China Daily News of September 22nd.

Autumn is here, and with her has come a profusion of lovely fashions, which, like the first colourful leaves of Autumn, have descended upon us at an unexpected moment, vividly prophetic of the modes that will prevail in the world of fashion during the winter season. Despite the simplicity of line there is no lack of variety in the fashions of the new season. Fabrics were never so beautiful, trimmings never more exquisitely lovely, nor were details ever more charmingly complete and correct. Godet treatments, scarfs, stoles and capelets are only a few of the details that acquit the new Autumn modes of the slightest suggestion of monotony and lift them far above the fashions of other years in beauty, variety and charm. True to prophecy the sued-finished fabrics are in highest favour for suits, coats, etc. It is a far cry from the heavy, bulky fabrics of yesterday to the softly-clinging woolens of to-day. For street garments brown is a great favourite, ranging from the exquisite russet and copper tones to a rather subdued malay. On the street one sees also quite a few coats in soft mahogany tones. Artichoke and other soft greens are seen, and a revival of gray is suggested by the number of coats appearing in dark shades of taupe or mole. Linings are most important. Satin and crepe linings continue much in vogue and many interesting effects are secured through the use of plaid or striped kasha. Evening wraps are mainly of rich brocades, velvet or satin. Occasionally one sees an evening wrap of crepe satin or even very sheer material. These wraps of lighter weight usually depend on a soft lining of printed velvet for warmth. Oftentimes they are reversible.

The above might well have been written after a visit to our Drapery Department, for it so aptly describes the modes. Why not call and inspect the Autumn Display?

Dollar Liner President Hayes Continues Her Trip Around World

The s.s. President Hayes sailed at 7 a.m. yesterday for New York via the Suez Canal with a full complement of passengers, on her third trip around the world.

Among the passengers joining at Shanghai were: Mr. and Mrs. R. Stanley Dollar and their two children, Master Robert Stanley Jr. and Miss Diana Dollar, accompanied by their nurse. Mr. Dollar, Vice-President of the Dollar Steamship Line, is on a world tour with his family and has spent a month in and about Shanghai.

Dr. P. Schleich, a noted German economist, is completing a world tour having spent considerable time in Japan and China studying the development of various manufacturing concerns. Mr. F. Kengelbacher of Messrs. Siber, Hegnner and Co. is taking his furlough at his home in Switzerland. Mr. W. A. Penell of the B. A. T., Mr. A. R. Bartlett representing large American exporters, Mr. and Mrs. Finley H. Lloyd, Mr. J. W. Lee, Mr. A. D. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Meagher, Mr. W. M. Peach, and Mr. T. L. Soong.

The following around the world passengers rejoined the ship delighted with their stay in Shanghai: Mrs. L. G. Armstrong, Mlle. R. W. A. Audi, Mr. Burney Bird and Mrs. Burney Bird, Mrs. W. M. Carrell, Miss R. Clanpitt, Miss Celia B. Cotter, Mrs. A. B. Forsythe, Miss J. V. Goodman, Mr. and Mrs. W. Jamieson, Miss M. Kane, Mrs. A. D. Moir, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Parker, Miss S J. Reid. Mr. R. W. Warring and Mr. A. Zellerbach.

Weather Reports

Oct. 9.—High pressures over central China and over the Pacific Ocean. The typhoon has rapidly passed by the S of Nippon NE ward. The other typhoon arrives to the S of the Formosa Strait and threatens the coast between Hongkong and Amoy. NEasterly breezes along our coasts. Strong cyclonic circulation over Formosa and over the northern China Sea. Fine weather in China. Rainy in Formosa.

Oct. 10.—Cloudy weather with some light rain at night. Normal and rather steady pressure. ENEly breezes.

Oct. 11.—Cloudy weather, getting variable. Unsteady winds along the coast, between Formosa and Shantung, because of a small secondary low centre, probably formed over Northern Formosa. Rough weather around the Pratas and along the Hongkong coast, because of the typhoon apparently slackening its way North-Wds.

Shanghai, Saturday, October 11, 1924

Well—This Changes The Entire Situation!

IF the victory of General Chang Tso-lin at Shanhaikwan is as complete as the Reuters reports from Mukden indicate, it completely changes the whole situation and makes the Mukden warlord the man of the hour. His associate and ally here in Shanghai, General Lu Yung-hsiang, of course also comes in for some of the glory, for although fighting a losing game, he has fought nevertheless, and without question his stubborn resistance here against Kiangsu has had the effect of holding a considerable body of General Wu Pei-fu's reinforcements down here when Wu needed them most badly in the North.

The fall of Shanhaikwan probably does not mean the end of the war so quickly as Reuters' optimistic report indicated yesterday, but it changes the situation nevertheless. It means that Chihli will not be able to carry the war into Manchuria, as General Wu Pei-fu so confidently stated a few days ago. Much depends now on the future tactics of General Chang Tso-lin. Shanhaikwan, from the standpoint of his strategy, is only one phase of the operations. He still has another army operating in the vicinity of Chihfengkow with Jehol as the objective. If this army is successful, it probably would mean the end of the war, for Peking then would stand unprotected even in spite of the resistance put up by the Chihli forces along the Peking-Mukden railroad between Tientsin and Chinwangtao. General Chang's object is the overthrow of the Peking Government, but campaign announcements often are modified to fit changing conditions. He might be satisfied with the overthrow of President Tsao Kun and the election of General Tuan Chi-jui to this office.

One significant element in the reported fall of Shanhaikwan is undoubtedly the blasting of the much advertised policy of peace-through-armed-force. If General Wu has to abandon his plans for the conquest of Manchuria, he may be forced to abandon his whole ambition of conquering the country and be willing to accept the inevitable—a general conference of all elements in the land to decide upon a peace by mutual agreement which would give all sections of the country and all interests a chance at self-expression.

When Sir Robert Hotung of Hongkong interviewed General Wu in Loyang many months ago on the subject of a "round-table" conference, he received a cold reception. General Wu was not ready for it, and would not be ready for it until he had conquered the country by armed force. Then only would he be willing to call a conference, and, of course, had he been successful in his plans, he could have held his own conference to suit himself anywhere and would not have required the help of Sir Robert Hotung or anybody else.

Although there have been hopes of a complete victory one way or the other in the present fight, it is possible that a deadlock this time may not be so unfortunate as the previous one, for there is a strong possibility that an awakened public opinion and economic pressure may force the militarists to take a commonsense view of the situation and agree to a conference. Regardless of which way the fighting finally stops this time, militarism will have received a body blow. The Government will be completely bankrupt and foreign and domestic pressure will all be in the direction of a peace by compromise to save the country from anarchy and possible Bolshevism.

The British Government Crisis

IT is a cynical reflection that the British Labor Government has been defeated, not on a question of high policy, so much as on a matter of procedure. For no matter how desirable it might have been to have forced the editor of the "Workers' Weekly" to answer in Court for his articles which are alleged to have incited the Army to disobey orders when called upon to intervene in Labor disputes, it can hardly be said that the fortunes of the British Empire were anything but remotely connected with the successful prosecution of that gentleman. The Attorney General has expressed his opinion that any such prosecution would have failed, an opinion which he doubtless expresses many times in the ordinary course of business, but Mr. Campbell, the editor in question, controlled a Labor newspaper. To have taken him to Court might have alienated the support he would otherwise give the government. On the other hand failure to set in motion the ordinary processes of justice would arouse the bitterest criticism of which Mr. Macdonald's opponents would not fail to take advantage. The failure to prosecute was, therefore, a tactical error.

As was predicted in these columns shortly after the last general election, the Labor Government lasted exactly as long as the Opposition chose. Its existence was dependent upon the goodwill of either the Liberal or Conservative parties, for as long as they chose to remain at odds with each other, the Labor party could count on the maintenance of a majority. The Opposition parties, however, have combined in their condemnation of the Anglo-Russian Treaty and even if they had not succeeded in defeating the government on this minor issue, it is apparent that the life of the government could only have been extended to the discussion of the ratification of the treaty—a matter merely of days.

When we come to consider the motives underlying the action of the Opposition parties, it seems clear that the time was ripe for the action they took. It is true that Mr. Macdonald would go to the country with what appears on the face of it an excellent record of achievement, for if he had only the settlement of the reparations question to his credit, that alone would have been sufficient to commend him and his party to the suffrages of the electors. The Budget would help him little enough, for the surplus he was able to use for the lightening of the burden of taxation was the result of the efforts of his predecessors in office. The Anglo-Russian Treaty on the other hand may in many quarters be held to discount the good he has done in other directions. If the Treaty is as bad as it is generally contended, and on the face of it it certainly would seem to be, the defeated government has made a mistake which may seriously jeopardise its chances at the polls. For the document for which ratification is sought is under the suspicion of being an agreement in which a Labor Government has unduly favored one committed to a Communistic policy. The suggestion of preferential treatment in such circumstances, especially where the trend of the agreement is held to be absolutely indefensible in view of the provisions of the Russian constitution, and the peculiar conception the Soviets appear to have on the matter of fulfilling their obligations, is one which must militate against the Prime Minister and his following.

If the opposition to this Treaty served to combine the Opposition parties, and there were in existence no inharmonious factors, it would be safe to predict a complete Labor defeat at the polls, for it would be possible to eliminate three-cornered fights in the constituencies of which Labor undoubtedly had the full benefit at the last general election. But there is no likelihood, so far as can be at present seen, of any agreement between Conservatives and Liberals calculated to obviate this difficulty. Consequently it may conceivably happen that no very material change will come over the constitution of the House of Commons as the result of the next general election. Labor may suffer some losses, but be still the deciding factor, holding the balance of power as the Irish members did a few years before the war. In that event another compromise may put Mr. McDonald in office, unable to secure ratification of the Anglo-Russian Treaty, or to pass any of the ultra-radical legislation necessary for the fulfilment of the election promises he has already made. From a British point of view in this part of the world especially, this is to be regretted for it entails a further period of governmental instability which cannot but react unfavorably on the fortunes of the country.

Excerpts From Great Writers

By Mathy

ISMS

People do not dislike the practice of teetotalism, says Mr. Chesterton; it is the theory they object to. Neither do they dislike either vegetables or vegetarians.

"What is resented," he goes on to say, "is the religious atmosphere that goes with teetotalism, what is resented is the ethical atmosphere that goes with vegetarianism."

"What men resist," he says again, in one of his whimsical paradoxes, "what men resist, in short, in all these cases is not the moral conduct, but the morality. Nothing can be immoral except morality."

I am one of those who take Gilbert Chesterton seriously. He cannot fool me with the humor with which he coats his pills of wisdom so as to get the crowd to swallow them while laughing. He is not a literary vaudevillian. He is one of the most sane philosophers of our day.

In the above-quoted sentence he hits the nail squarely on the head. Morals are the salvation of men. Morality has been a chief factor in making men immoral.

I loathe an ISM. I like Americans, but most all of the Americanism I have seen is bumptious and vulgar. I believe in many of the ideas of the socialists, and single-taxers; but socialism, anarchism, and single-taxism find me cold. Christians I regard as superior to pagans, yet what crimes have been committed in the name of Christianity! Real Christians, for instance, would shun war and decline to torture their fellow-creatures; yet these outrages have been cheerfully engaged in by Christianity.

The trouble is that when you make an ISM you squeeze all the humanity out of the thing and get a purely intellectual product, a sect, cult, or system, a non-human affair; and what ceases to be human easily becomes diabolical upon occasion.

We become convinced of the truth of a certain idea; we want to advance the truth; we therefore form a party or movement; we are dazzled, humbugged, deceived by apparent rapid success. In reality, we have stabbed the truth under the fifth rib.

Any truth or group of truths taken away from the human beings who hold them becomes half false and entirely dangerous.

Browning was wonderful; Browningism, the cult is piffle. So are Bergsonism, and Emersonism, and Marxism.

So in Morals. When a man has a moral conviction and rules his own life by it, he is like a green tree in a desert land unto his fellows; when he organises and begins to impose his SYSTEM OF MORALITY upon others, we flee him as the pest.

The tyranny of a bad man is far more easily to be borne than moral tyranny. For the tyranny of the wicked is usually entirely personal, while that of the moral becomes a perfected Juggernaut car, utterly without bowels of mercy.

And why cannot a man speak forth the truths he sees here and there without somebody running up to him and clapping a LABEL on him?

When I meet a deeply moral man, who keeps his mouth shut and does not try to uplift me I am uplifted, I am made more moral by his presence; when the professional uplifters get after me with their system of morality, I have a strong desire to rob a bank.

Greece May Be Facing Dictatorship

Athens, September 9.—Dictatorship in Italy, Spain, Hungary. Is Greece to be added to the string? It does not seem impossible.

Two years ago M. Papanastasiou was in prison. This year, M. Papanastasiou was Prime Minister, and the men who had put him in prison in 1922 because of his republican tendencies were scattered in exile or had met death before a firing squad. But two days later this same Papanastasiou, who to all appearances had possessed an overwhelming majority in Parliament, was faced with disaster as a result of the dramatic resignation of his Minister of War, General Condylis, and the country was plunged overnight into a Ministerial crisis.

The case of M. Papanastasiou is the case of Greece. Whoever has been on top at one moment has been on the bottom at the next. Since the war there has been no political stability, and as a result no economic nor financial stability. There has been a growing feeling, even among the Greeks themselves to whom politics is the principal interest in life, that the political gamble must stop, and that only a strong hand can stop it. For the moment Parliament has denied the reins of government to General Condylis. He himself asserts that he will not attempt a coup de force. Nevertheless, it is quite possible that before long he will be in control of the Greek Republic.

"HARDNESS" DESCRIBES GENERAL CONDYLIS

General Condylis is a hard, relentless man, trained in the ways of the army, in the field, a man whose furrowed face, set mouth and abrupt manner proclaim his self-confidence, his powerful perseverance, his ability to stand criticism, but not to forgive it. He is a hard man. Let the word be repeated, for it is the one that best describes him. Hardness is written on his face and in his history, and breathes through what he says of his future.

At the beginning of the first Balkan war he was a corporal. He fought through both Balkan wars, in Macedonia during the Great war, then in Anatolia, and ended up a Colonel. He was one of those who, in 1917, helped Venizelos set up the revolutionary government at Saloniki. He was sent by Venizelos to subdue the Chaloydic peninsula, which had held out for the King. He subdued it by means that seem to have been relentless, and sent a large number of "volunteers" to join the Venizelos forces. But he was never really one of Venizelos' men.

When King Constantine returned to Greece late in 1920 Condylis betook himself to Constantinople where he gathered a considerable number of disaffected officers about him. His enemies say he worked for a Greek debacle in Asia Minor in order to satisfy his vengeance against the King. His friends say the debacle was already coming and that he knew the only way to avoid it was to change the inefficient royalist command. When the King was again dethroned in 1922 Condylis returned to the army, but resigned during the Lausanne negotiations to become a Deputy in Parliament and fight for the republican cause which he believed Venizelos supported only half-heartedly.

RAISED PAY OF THE SOLDIERS

Four months ago General Condylis became Minister of War in the Cabinet formed by M. Papanastasiou, who, it will be remembered, was willing to go to prison for his republicanism. He at once began setting his house in order. The first thing he did was to raise the pay of the soldiers. It was true, he said, that the railways were in a bad way and Athens was often without water; but it was of first importance to give the army high enough pay so that he might exact thorough honesty from every soldier and officer.

His resignation came over a comparatively small matter that shows the difference between his temper and that of Papanastasiou. There have been increasingly numerous strikes of seamen at Piraeus, of railway men in Macedonia and tramway men in Athens. Several hundred soldiers of the class of '22 joined a band of strikers from the Piraeus and marched to the capital, the soldiers to demand demobilization, the seamen to make a demonstration in behalf of their demands for higher pay.

Papanastasiou received them and argued with them. Condylis said it was mutiny and was for dispersing them by force. He said, further, it was only a symptom of the government's tendency to side weakly with forces of disorder. He accused the government of encouraging bolshevism (not only positively, by toadying to labor, but also negatively, by leaving the refugees from Asia Minor in such pitiable condition) and resigned with a trumpet blast for "law and order" and the regeneration of Greek national life.

LIVES IN UNPRETENTIOUS QUARTERS

General Condylis lives in unpretentious rooms in one of the most unpretentious of the new districts on the outskirts of Athens. The whitewashed walls of his sparsely furnished study have a faded photograph or two of groups of soldier friends in old days in Macedonia. Above his desk, which was strewn with cigarette stubs, is a small picture of Napoleon; another picture of Napoleon is propped up among piles of papers on a side table.

"My political enemies" he said, "are responsible for the idea that I wish to overthrow the present government as the first step toward a dictatorship. I do not in the least want to work with Parliament, or merely wish to substitute acts for vague ideas and much talk.

"Much must be done for the refugees before winter comes, and yet the government delays. I wish the government to assume a larger role in the work for the refugees. If the government, which is poor, does more, the Greeks who are rich will do more. If not, they must be made to do more.

REFUGEES PRESENT MANY PROBLEMS

In addition to the grave social problem presented by the many refugees, who, because of their sufferings, are an easy prey for foreign propagandists, we have labor problems to be dealt with. In the face of them the government has temporized and hesitated. I want to keep Greece together. That can only be done if there is a new spirit of activity and firmness and self-sacrifice on the part of the government which can be transmitted to the people. It is not enough to tell people to do such and such. They must be shown by example. And then if needs be, they must be compelled.

"To urge a policy of firmness does not mean that Greece should adopt a chauvinistic attitude toward Turkey or Italy or any other nation. We need peace abroad if we are to succeed in regenerating Greece and restoring her internal order, which is broken and decayed as a result of many wars, long and bitter partisan strife and the terrible burden of the refugees.

"Officials, like the people as a whole, must work harder and gamble less. To such a proposal some will say yes; they must be watched. Some will perhaps say no, and offer to divide their profits if left undisturbed; those must be exterminated."

In these last sentences General Condylis summed up his whole policy and faith—a policy of honesty, and a faith in force as the best means of achieving it.

Once Overs

BY J. J. MUNDY

Too often married persons are not inclined to try to be interested in the same things, when it comes to recreation

The husband may follow one course of enjoyment and the wife a different bent in getting pleasure.

They then find persons of the opposite sex who do like what they enjoy.

Often a mutual interest develops a liking in a person outside the home, and their interest in each other destroys the peace of husband and wife.

When a husband and a wife persist in following different courses, and each refuses to become a party to the other's enjoyment, there often is an unconscious effort to seek those who do enjoy the same things.

An attractive woman can always find someone who is pleased with her society, and a man with or without money can find someone who will fracture the rules of society if their vanity is sufficiently aroused.

A husband and wife should try to be interested in the same recreations. Neither should go into a sport which is too expensive, for the other to enjoy.

The Psychology Of Dwarf Trees

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

The oldest nations are the most childish, but to say that is not to speak disrespectfully of them. There is probably more of the pure essence of humanity in the child than in the adult, and the Founder of Christianity averred that only by becoming as little children could men render themselves fit for the higher life.

We may take China's word for it that she is the oldest of nations, for while the claim may not be true by the test of time it is true by test of immutability. And where is the child's type of mind more fully displayed by adult life than in China?

To take a curious instance, consider the singular art of cultivating dwarf trees, which originated in China, though the Japanese, with their genius of imitation, have also developed it, and have done more than the Chinese would ever have done, or desired to do, to set its products before the world. In ancient times only the emperors and the great nobles could own dwarf trees in China. The processes by which the growth of the trees was arrested were carefully guarded secrets.

But now many collections of the strange-looking dwarfs of the vegtable world exist in China, Indochina and Japan. The production of these tiny specimens of oaks, pines, bamboos and other trees, which though but a few inches high, have all the forms and characteristics of their fully grown relatives, and often live to an equal age, is the result of a play of the imagination resmbling that in which the author of "Gulliver's Travels" indulged when he wrote his story of the miniature kingdom of Lilliput and its minuscule inhabitants.

While many of the uses to which the dwarf trees are put in China signify their association with religious ideas and family worship yet the forms in which they are displayed show that the underlying motive for their production is that of a child's interest in toy imitations of the great world around. The desire for these things takes its rise in a compartment of the brain which for many of us becomes completely closed after adult years are attained, but whose door is sometimes thrown open again in the evening of life.

It originates from the instinctive tendency to get things down to manageable dimensions, so that they can be easily seen and grasped in their entirety. It is a child's characteristic; the wish to seize and handle everything—even to the moon in the sky!

The human spirit is not naturally humble; there is no humility about a child, but, on the contrary, with it feeling of mastery dominates. It believes everything to be subject to its dominion, and it likes to have great, large, things placed before it in minimized dimensions, so that it can indulge its innate tendency to domineer. In its toys it sees the world at its feet. It laughs exultantly while it mauls them at its will. That laugh is an impulsive expression of the masterful human spirt as it awakens, yet untamed, in this world.

How thoroughly play-like is the enjoyment produced by the Chinese collections of dwarf trees may be understood from a description of one in a house in Indochina. It consists of an imitation mountain a few feet high, completely covered with several species of the dwarfs arranged in climbing forests, amidst which appears miniature terraces and cliffs bearing little pagodas, whose summits rise realistically out of the mass of tiny foliage, together with perfectly formed little houses and bridges thrown across diminutive chasms, while in tiny gardens, moss-covered grottoes are seen, with statues scattered about.

Indeed it is a bit of a real Chinese Lilliput, but so small that Gulliver could have planted one foot on each side of the mountain. And these things are held in great honor and admiration on that crowded Eastern slope of the globe.

Trails of Ostrich Give Picturesque and Simple Effect to New Hats

Have you a trail on your new hat.

If you have not and if you are looking for an idea for a picturesque autumn or winter hat this trail idea is worth investigation. Once we used the word trail to apply to the train of a frock—a peacock's gorgeous drooping tail, the fiery wake of a comet. In the lingo of new fashions it means a long and drooping ornament of ostrich attached to the back—at one side—of a picturesque hat. Usually and correctly there should be no other trimming on a hat.

The sketch shows a black velvet hat with a trail of gray ostrich at the right back.. Sometimes a shorter trail is attached to a small hat with narrow upturned brim. Lewis makes use of the same idea in a Rembrandt shaped black panne velvet hat with a large paradise pompon at the right back. It cannot help but brush the shoulder and neck every time the wearer turns her head.

A helmet shape hat has much the same effect with a very long tassel of straight plumage hanging at the right side toward the back. The trail idea is even made use of in evening headdresses. Simple bandeaux made of twisted ostrich feathers show a long trail of the ostrich flues placed just over one ear.

The question of color is one that interests the woman who has still to buy her autumn hats. Black knows no fall from favor, browns in many tones are well chosen. There are greens for those who find them becoming, and red tones of the fuchsia persuasion and crushed strawberry for those who are not averse to wearing such bright color above their eyes.

A hat to go with every frock is the ambition of the well dressed French woman. This does not mean matching hats. With a black velvet frock trimmed with emerald green duvetine from Redfern there is a black plush hat trimmed with green suede. It's a new trick to wear a wide-brimmed Breton sailor in all white or all black trimmed only with a band of the material of the dress with which it is worn.

MY BEST SALAD DRESSINGS

For Cabbage Salad

Here is the recipe for the old-time cabbage salad dressing. It calls for two egg yolks, one teaspoon of mustard, one teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of cream, one tablespoon of butter, three teaspoons of sugar, and two-thirds of a cup of hot vinegar. Mix and heat these ingredients in a double boiler until thick. When slightly cool pour over the chopped cabbage and set away to cool before serving.

For Cold Vegetable Salad

This is an old Southern recipe, used in the days before mayonnaise dressing was much heard of in this country and when French dressing was regarded with suspicion by many Americans. To make this put three tablespoons of melted butter in a saucepan and stir. Add four tablespoons of good vinegar, one-half teaspoon of English mustard, one-half teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of sugar, a dash of cayenne and white pepper. Let it all come to a boil. Take from the fire and add one well beaten egg. Cook a few minutes more, stirring to keep smooth. When cool add three tablespoons of cream and a little chopped parsley, with a bit of onion juice if desired.

SOMETHING TO MAKE

Now that people so generally use table doilies instead of tabecloths for breakfast, luncheon, and often even for dinner, there is a real need for numerous attractive hot-dish pads. In the old days when we used tableclothes exclusively the simplest way to manage was to slip an asbestos pad between husher or felt and the tablecloth at the place where the hot dish would be set and thus protect the table. Moderately warm dishes could be set on the table that was well protected with a thick husher, but now even warmed dishes sometimes harm the table through a thin thickness of linen doily or runner.

One attractive sort of hot dish pad recently revived is made of what used to be called candle wick. In some of the shops they are sold in sets of half-dozen assorted shapes and sizes and they fetch quite a price. They are made on a simple wooden frame, the wicks being drawn back and forth, crossing at intervals of an inch or less. The wicks are carefully tied together at all intersections, and the ends, where turned on the frame, are then cut to form fringed ends. It is not a difficult task nor one that tries the eyes at all.

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

Little chaps in office, grafting on the State,
Quickly get the foolish notion that they're great;
Pompously they answer questions that are small,
Trying to make others think they know it all.
Cocky little bantams with their lofty airs,
Thinking it important to be splitting hairs.

How they love to order, and how proud they are
Of their petty titles, each a little czar;
Bow before them humbly, hold your hat in hand;
Hurry to obey them when they give command;
Solemnly and harshly they can bawl you out
When there's any trifle you forget about.

Little fellows given brief authority
Lose the sense of humor, if such sense there be;
Pompously they mumble trite and foolish things,
Suddenly forgetting whence their power springs;
Uselessly, too often, they fill swivel chairs,
Making vain pretensions to have heavy cares.

More and more officials, as the years go by,
Help to keep the taxes we must pay too high;
Strutting little bantams, how they swell and pose!
Why we tolerate them heaven only knows;
Shortened office hours, long vacations, too;
Twenty-seven doing what one ought to do.

Bursting Of Shells Seen At Sungkiang Church Top

(Special Correspondence)

Sungkiang, Oct. 7.—Fighting has started again today. About six o'clock this morning, the cannon began to boom and this has been kept up in a desultory fashion all day. However between five and six o'clock things got a bit more exciting and considerable rifle firing was heard to the southeast, probably from Tuh Sung-kaung. This kept up briskly for a short time and then quieted down. Then a little later on cannon fire was heard again and the sounds seemed clearer than before. On our church tower we could see the bursting of shells, not many, however, and hear the rattle also of guns. There seemed to be quite a line down the Whangpoo River and the cannon could be heard from at least four directions, embracing the region of Tunglemiau on the south west and on down to Tuh Sung in the south east. A report came to us that six boats had attempted to cross the Whangpoo at Tuh Sung Kaung, four of them being destroyed. Another report said that they had succeeded in crossing the Whangpoo and there was a fear that they would reach the East Gate before morning. We hear from the police that they have been ordered to be especially on their guard for trouble and that machine guns have been placed at the four gates of the city. Another report said that a shell had burst in the city not far from the general's yamen. This I do not believe at all, for it would have been seen by some one on our church tower. No sound has come from Bridge 31 and it is likely that they have no thought of attempting to attack so strongly entrenched a place.

We were a little upset yesterday when the train failed to come in the morning. We did not know to what extent the railroad had been damaged and thought that we were put off for good from outside communications. However the track was repaired and a train arrived yesterday afternoon, so conditions brightened. They say that Kiangsu spies drew out the spikes and took up some rails, but I would not be surprised if it was found that the extra service the road has been put to during the last month with little or no repairs was too much for it and the spikes just gave way from some rotten cross tie.

Later. The rifle firing has been much more brisk and seems to be nearer. We have heard no cannon for some time. The chief-of-police told one of my teachers that a cannon ball struck within a short distance of the general's yamen. As the time was before six o'clock, it might have been possible, but still I have some doubts.

ONE OF MOST DISTINGUISHED GROUPS EVER PHOTOGRAPHED.

Colorful Program Is Staged As Hume Is Inaugurated President Of Yale-In-China

Changsha, Oct. 3.—Changsha has seldom seen as colorful an occasion as that today when Edward Hicks Hume, M.A., M.D., LL. D., was inducted as the first President of the Colleges of Yale-in-China. There was nothing lacking to make the day a significant and memorable day to all.

Yale-in-China, the outgrowth of the work of the Yale Mission which was founded in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1903, has passed through 21 years of development without a President. It is interesting to recall that 223 years have elapsed between the time when the first President of Yale College in New Haven took office and the time when the first President of this daughter institution was inducted. It is hardly possible that those who participated in the induction of President Abraham Pierson in 1701 could have had the sense of the international importance of the event which was present in the minds of those who saw President Hume inaugurated today.

The academic procession of faculty and guests was brilliant in colors and symbols of universities and colleges all over the world. There were degrees from Australian and several Asiatic institutions as well as from Upsala, Cambridge, Edinburgh, Yale, Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Columbia, Princeton, Amherst and other European and American institutions to a total of at least 25 in all. The brilliant colors of the European degrees was set off in beautiful contrast with the colors of gray-coated Chinese soldiers who walked along with the procession as bodyguards of the provincial Governor.

The ceremony was in Atterbury Memorial Chapel and was conducted almost entirely in Chinese. The invocaton was pronounced by a graduate of the College of Yale-in-China, following which Dr. Frank A. Keller of the Hunan Bible Institute told of the events in 1903 when the Yale Mission was unanimously invited by the conference of missions in Hunan to establish an institution of higher learning for this section.

The official representative of the Board of Trustees of the Yale Foreign Missionary Society in America, President Yun-siang Tsao of Tsing Hua College, who is also vice-president of the YFMS, then spoke and formally inducted Dr. Hume as President. Dr. F. C Yen, Dean of the Hunan-Yale College of Medicine, spoke in welcome to the President from the faculties of Arts and Medicine in Yale-in-China. Following this the official welcome to the President from Yale University was presented by Professor Henry Walcott Farnam, R. P.D., LL. D., Professor Emeritus of Economics who had come from New Haven for the occasion.

Greetings from the Peking Union Medical College were conveyed by Dr. J. H. Liu, Associate Professor of Surgery and official delegate. Other sister institutions by delegate, telegram and letter conveyed their felicitations. Governor Chao Heng-ti and the Speaker of the Provincial Assembly conveyed greetings from the local government and messages were read from Peking expressing the pleasure of representatives of the Central Government. Mr. Po Sun-tseng of the I Fang School, Changsha, and other local educators expressed their welcome, two of them in poetical form.

President Hume's Inaugural Address was a scholarly development of the idea contained in the Latin Quotation on one of the Yale Chapel windows: "Qui transtulit sustinet." He applied it by pointing out that China had been brought to this new day, kept vital and strong by a guiding Providence, so as to share in contributing new spiritual and physical energy to the life of the world. The place of the institution of higher education thus becomes clear in this view of coming China.

The inaugural festivities were followed by a conference on educational policies in which full advantage was taken of the unusual collection of distinguished educators present as visitors and guests of Yale-in-China.

The unofficial but none-the-less real relationship of Yale University in New Haven to Yale-in-China is made clear in this official greeting transmitted by Professor Farnam:

"The President, fellows and faculty of Yale University take pleasure in accepting the invitation af the Trustees and Faculty of Yale-in-China to be represented at the inauguration of Edward Hicks Hume, M.D., LL. D., as President of the Colleges on October third, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four.

"Yale is especially glad of this opportunity to congratulate Yale-in-China on its splendid record of service and to extend best wishes for its success in the future under the administration of its first President, Edward H. Hume, B.A., Yale 1897, F.A., (Honorary) 1912, because she looks upon Yale-in-China as her representative in another field of work.

"Founded in 1903 by the Yale Mission, composed of a group of Yale Alumni, as a collegiate school, Yale-in-China now consists of the College of Yale-in-China, the Hunan-Yale College of Medicine and Hospital, and the Hunan-Yale School of Nursing, in the twenty years of its history Yale men have been directly responsible for this development either through personal service as administrators and members of the faculty or through contribution which have made development possible. Today Yale-in-China stands as one of the foremost examples of the successful cooperation of the East and West in education. Dr. Hume, whose family has given devoted service to Christian education for generations, has had a part in this achievement since 1905. Under his leadership new and ever greater things are to be expected of Yale-in-China.

"In recognition of the many ties that bind Yale University and Yale-in-China, the officers of the University are proud to designate Henry Walcott Farnam, B.A. Yale 1874, M.A. 1876, LL. D. 1923 to convey their best wishes to Yale-in-China and its President. Robert Maynard Hutchens, Secretary."

STUDENTS REVIVE ANTI-JAPANESE BOYCOTT SPIRIT

(Special Correspondence)

Foochow, Oct. 4.—An Anti-Japanese spirit has again manifested itself in the Chinese student body here. A few days ago the students issued a circular warning shopkeepers that a limit of three days was given them in which to clean out their shops, that is, remove all Japanese goods. This circular was widely distributed. The matter became known to Police Commissioner Kao and he issued a proclamation forbidding any disturbance of the public peace and promising dire punishment for any who dared to disobey. On the afternoon of Oct. 4, the students defied the authority of the police commissioner by starting out on their rounds of investigation. They destroyed a large quantity of Formosan fruit and other Japanese products and many shops through fear closed their doors.

They went to a shop on Kuanyin Ching street well known for handling Japanese goods and found the doors shut. They obliged the man to open and then entered. An altercation ensued in which the shop keeper's ear was nearly cut off and he received in addition four knife wounds. In this condition he was taken to the Japanese hospital on the Maloo. Nothing is definitely known as to the cause of this sudden breaking out of anti-Japanese feeling but that it still exists is proven by this incident. What Kao will do to maintain the place here is awaited with interest.

Marx Has Minimum Political Program

(French Wireless Through Reuter)

Berlin, Oct. 9.—Chancellor Marx has established a minimum program for domestic and foreign politics which will serve as the basis of the negotiations in connection with the reconstruction of the Cabinet by the participation of Social Democrats and Nationalists. The program was today communicated to the different parties.
